Hello Maurilio,

You paid 30,500 MXN (charged via credit card) for the computers, etc. so in an effort to reimburse you 30,500 MXN I kept track of the daily exchange rate for each payment sent via Zelle. (FYI, the District instructed me to provide receipts and exchange rate for each reimbursement.)

Unfortunately, Zelle would not allow me to send you more than $500 in a 24-hr period, so I tracked the exchange rate for each reimbursement using this site... https://www.xe.com/currencyconverter/convert/?

Amount=1%2C610.50&From=USD&To=MXN

My 1st Zelle transfer was 500 USD (= 9419.34 MXN), 2nd transfer was 500 USD (= 9,452.96 MXN), 3rd transfer was 500 USD (= 9,526.84 MXN), and the final Zelle transfer was 110.50 USD (= 2,101.38 MXN) so I reimbursed you a total of 1610.50 USD (= 30,500.52 MXN based on each day's exchange rate, see attached.) Today's exchange rate using that same site tells me 1610.50 USD = 30,731.42 MXN (see attached).

Since we both bank with Wells Fargo, I decided to call Wells Fargo, explain the situation, and they recommended we use Wells Fargo's conversion calculator -- <https://www.wellsfargo.com/foreign-exchange/currency-rates/>. Wells Fargo also confirmed that you'll receive 30,500 MXN for 1704.83 USD today (see attached) -- so I just transferred you another 94.33 USD via Zelle (total Zelle transfers = 1704.83 USD). They also explained that you can order/request pesos online using this same exchange rate (no additional charge).

Now that we've spent 1704.83 USD for the computers and installation/setup, there is 295.17 USD left for the computer lab's monthly internet service. How much will it cost each month? Can you send me info or a link?

Thanks,

Linda
